SIGNIFICANT MEETING

THE meeting between President Kennedy and Mr Andrei Gromyko which takes place today indicates that a decisive stage has been reached in the Berlin negotiations. •

The fact that Mr Llewellyn Thompson, United States Ambassador to Russia is returning to Washington to attend the meetings, is a significant pointer.

It means that this is just not another session, with someone talking double talk. Not of course that Russia will not try to gain every advantage, and place every obstacle in the way of a negotiated solution.

The impression has at last gained ground in Russia means business. If Russia wants to be really! tough, then America wil get tough also.

Confirmation

FURTHER confirmation. Western Foreign Ministers. ut their meeting Washington last month determined that they would meet the Soviet side only if the latter were prepared to meet in the spirit of give and take.

If the Russians fully appreclate what that means, and have come to negotiate in that manner, then there is every reason for hope.

At the moment, it is impossible to say how far the ground is prepared. Mr Rusk the American

Secretary of State, went to Western Powers to pioneer the prospects of "meaningful negotiations."

Difficult

TTOW far he got with this difficult assignment is not known, but the fact that he too will join the President in meeting the Soviet Foreign Minister, is another pointer to the decisive stage of negotiations.

However, before any side | industry ask what exactly is behind effort. Russia's nuclear gically to synchronise with the Berlin crisis.

U.S. and Russia furor among close agreement

United Nations, Oct. 5. The United States and the Soviet Union were reported tonight to be "very close to agreement" on a formula to permit the appointment of an Acting Secretary-General of the United Nations.

A senior member of the Soviet bloc told Reuter that the only outstanding question between the two sides was the number of deputies or assistants that would be appointed to aid the new chief executive and the "kind of consultations" that he would have with these subordinates.

Hongkong police officer detained John Tsang, Assistant Superintendent of Police, has been detained on a warrant under the Deportation of Aliens Ordinance, a Government spokesman said this morning.

The spokesman declined to elaborate on the reason for which the warrant was issued against Tsang. Local Chinese papers reported this morning that a senior Chinese police officer was summoned by the Police Headquarters for interrogation and has been detained for the last two days.

This and the dismissal last month of two police inspectors from the service are indicative of the move taken by the Police force to purge itself of members involved in certain activities, said one of the reports.

Special nature

Prior to his long-drawn-out interrogation, the senior police officer's relatives had been visited by a number of high-ranking officers from a branch of the Police force and were brought to the department for interrogation, said the report.

It was neither the Criminal Investigation nor the Anti-Corruption Branch that had conducted the inquiries, the report went on.

Apparently the subject of the investigation is of a special nature, the report alleged.

keep with change

One of the most interesting sides of life in Tokyo for a foreign resident, is trying to keep pace with the way the city keeps changing.

ly new aspect within a matter of weeks. This is due in part to the practice of not only "lottowing the leader" but if possible to tread right on his heels, If somebody sets up a teashop in a particular street and i prospers, others immediately spring up all around the original subscriptions and newspaper as the owners believe the locadelivery enquiries to the tion is a "lucky" one for that kind of business.

Strangely enough, this doesn't lead to an over-supply of a commodity and a too thinly-spread buying public. Instead, it creates in the public mind an image of an area for a particular requirement - much the same as Soho in London is associated with a wide variety of eating places. In the suburb of Shinjuku, there wasn't any dressmaking school ten years ago. Somebody started one and today there are dozens of them-one actually having an enrolment of over 10,000 pretty teenagers. Dotted

Right next to the Russian Embassy in a very stald and quiet part of the city, an American set up an all-night snack bar specialising in hot dogs, hamburgers and similar revolting types of foodstuffs. It was an immediate success. The same street is now dotted with allnight restaurants, bars, coffee shops and "clubs" of all description - and the lot are packed full through to dawn.

As a result of this, many peace-loving residents moved elsewhere - often after being paid fancy prices for their land. KWOK—The Rev. & Mrs Henry As more residents were witting Kwok, Mr & Mrs Peter Kwok, to move, houses and shops were Mr Camillus Kwok and sisters bought, torn down and replaced friends and business concerns for their sympathy and kind messages of condolences, floral tributes and attendance at the funeral of their beloved father, the late Mr Kwok Hin Wang.

All growing cities keep changing a little, but few can equal the swift and almost dramatic strokes that Tokyo makes to alter its face.

About the only things that never change are the "Letters to the Editor" in the English-language newspapers. Boiled down, they comprise two basic subjects ---Japanese "morality" and whether the Japanese are goodmannered or otherwise.

Every so often, there's a flare-American military chaplain. U.S. military wives who have plenty of time on their hands, mood strikes them. The main trouble is that there are no real rules of reference in 'attempting to make comparisons or question the Japanese way of life and doing things.

Letters At present, there are letters ranging back and forth about Japanese men having mistresses. One "Non-American Foreigner" wrote in vigorous defence of this pastime and quoted his own grandfather's case as being an "excellent testimonial to his financial stability and personal virility that he passed away at the age of 97, happy, contented, unfrustrated, deeply mourned by his devoted widow-and eleven mistresses." The Asahi Evening News got the bright idea of publishing photos from readers showing shop signs and other forms of garbled English (Japlish). Each one printed would be revarded with Y1.000 (£1) prize money. The first four were quite good and worth a smirk. The fifth was a photostat of Asahi's front-page of but a few weeks ago. showing a three-column headline "Solution To Laotlan Crisis Unsolved." They paid up and said they were sending the "pinch-hitting American deskman to brush up his native tongue." The Metropolitan Police said that up to September 25, there had been 367 cases of hit-and-400 cases would be achieved by the end of the month. On the other hand, after ssuing such a report which would make the most adventuresome decide to stay at home, they came up with the story of a group of residents on one highway which had requested permission to "dig holes in the road to slow down the drivers." It seems that these unfortunate householders had all had their homes sideswiped by passing vehicles on the narrow stretch where they live. Two houses had been, "completely damplished" demolished" and another one had been hit six times-apparently still standing up under the strain. This matter—as one Japanese editorial said—"calls for deep self-reflection." It falled to say recisely, by whom,

One of the first two British doctors to go out to Laos under the technical co-operation scheme of the Colombo Plan, Dr A. Brown examines the eyes of a little Laction girl in Vientiane, during a clinic. The clinic is held inside the well-equipped vehicle which is driven round outlying villages to bring medical help to the sick. In May this year a second British medical team went out to Laos. They have been helped by a member of the British Voluntary Service Overseas organisation (VSO) which every year sends hand-picked young men and women all over the world. This year VSO has sent 160 people abroad, serving in 33 countries including 10 dependent countries outside the Commonwealth. Every volunteer goes at the request of the government concerned or some official organisation. They embark an teaching, youth work, agricultural extension, training for citizenship, community development, technical instruction and women's work.

Slim trousers with slanted pockets and no turn-ups make for a "long-legged" look. A more formal, side-vented, double-breasted suit is predicted as successor to the singlebreasted suit at present in fashion.

Topeonts are shorter and shoes narrower, their squarer toes ousting "winklepicker" pointed shoes. HAT A MUST

"No well-dressed man will be seen without a hat," the Guild forecasts, and those worn will have brims far narrower than before, wider bands and tapered crowns. Strong colours are invoured especially golds and blues, also tweeds and decorated bands.

Matching sets of clothes included the double-top-the men's version of the twin-set -shirt, sweater and cardigan to tone, and matching sets of handkerchiefs, ties and scarves Materials consist of English and Scottish traditional cloths for suits, with a return of gabardine for slacks.
